

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to have their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a obvious example of the problems with media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves without charge, and is obligated, by law, to serve the public interest. When large companies control the airwaves, we recieve more of what's in the financial interest of the company and less of what we need for our democracy.

Sinclair's actions show why media ownership rules should be strengthened, not weakend. Sinclair's actions show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
